When is Easter?

Which is the true Easter day in 1900? Some people think Easter should be kept on April 23, and not on April 15. The rule is, "Easter day is always the first Sunday after the full moon which happens upon or next after the 21st day of March; if the full moon happens upon Sunday, Easter day is the Sunday after." The Rev. Allen Whitworth, vicar of All Saints, Margaret street, who is an expert in the matter, explains in the All Saints' Magazine that in order that the church might not be dependent on future astronomical calculations, he adopted a set of rules by which to determine the dates on which the full moon should be assumed to fall. This fictitious full moon can always be found in the tables at the beginning of the prayer book, and by common consent of western Christendom this tabular full moon is used in the determination of Easter.

This year the tables give Saturday, April 14, as the date of the Paschal full moon, but the actual moon in the heavens is not full until midnight; that is, the astronomical full moon falls on Sunday, April 15. It was followed the astronomical moon, Easter Sunday would be the following Sunday, April 22, but as we accept the ecclesiastical moon we keep Easter on the 15.—London News.

DANCING PARTY.

Will be Remembered as the Greatest Event of the Kind ever Given in Bethel.

About two weeks ago it became noised about that the gentlemen of Bethel were to give a dancing party, and our people, knowing full well that the promoters were not of the kind that do things at halves, naturally looked forward to the occasion as an affair that would doubtless prove the event of the season, but when last Friday night saw over one hundred couples gliding through the intricacies of the dance, besides a crowded gallery of spectators, all agreed that it was not the event of the season, or of a generation, but that it eclipsed all other parties of the kind ever given in Bethel.

The decorations, as arranged by Maj. True, added in no small way, to the beauty and gracefulness of the occasion; with red, white and blue draped above and on either side, and the deep, rich light from the banquet lamps falling upon a dark evergreen background, the stage presented a picture, beautiful in the extreme. In addition to the stage decorations, the punch tables in the various parts of the hall were pleasingly decorated with pinks, ferns, and smilax, and presented an exceedingly attractive appearance.

At the appointed hour the happy company began to enter and were cordially received by Dr. C. D. Hill, and Messrs. G. R. Wiley and Elmer Young; for a solid hour they continued to throng in, and when the orchestra struck the first note of the grand march, and nearly one hundred couples, led by Dr. Hill and Miss Alice Billings, had taken their places, the scene presented a beautiful picture, indeed, to all who admire the social dance.

If we have made no mistake, the grand march was made up as follows:

Dr. C. D. Hill and Alice Billings.
E. H. Young and wife.
Edward King and Florence Carter.

F. H. Young and wife.
F. J. Tyler and wife.

Bonj. Goodwin and Fannie Mason.

A. C. Johnson and wife.
E. E. Hanson and wife.
T. F. Hastings and wife.

E. C. Rowe and wife.
John Swan and wife.
A. C. Frost and wife.

Dr. J. A. Twaddle and wife.
M. W. Chandler and Ella Chandler.

F. L. Edwards and wife.
Ernie Walker and Edith Walker.
Bert Young and wife.

Bert Rowe and Alice Purington.
Howard Carter and Barbara Carter.

Dr. Norman Gehring and Bertha Wiley.

J. C. Billings and wife.
Durward Mason and Mrs. Vitella Davis.

Maj. True and Sophia Roberts.
A. L. Meserve and Mrs. A. G. Wiley.

Dr. J. G. Gehring and Elsie Weitz.

Arthur Richardson and Ethel Richardson.

E. A. Wyman and Ethel Hammons.

H. M. Farwell and wife.

Edwin A. Barker and Ruth Andrews.

Walter Lawrence and Ruby Wells.

Fenwick Holmes and Grace Chapman.

David Brown and Mrs. Carrie Sanborn.

Gerry Morgan and Mrs. Wheeler.
Gilbert W. Tuell and Cleo Russell.

Merritt Gay and Anna Carlson.
Dan Smith and Ruby Smith.

Harry Brooks and Gertrude Brooks.

Franklin Leach and Josephine Thurston.

Will Virgin and Mae Wiley.
Leonard Pratt and Maud Chute.

Victor Gehring and Gladys Wiley.

Chas. Holmes and Mildred Tuell.
Fred Kimball and wife.

Phil Morton and Ethel Sanborn.
Philip Maher and Mrs. Frank Merrill.

Frank Young and daughter, Hattie.

Sewall Lyon and Vivian Kelliher.

Jack Arnold and Beatrice Kelliher.

Bert Sanborn and Mrs. Sawyer.
Fred Bartlett and Bessie Searle.

It is sufficient to say that the music was furnished by Burnham & Barney's orchestra of Berlin, N. H., which has an established reputation among our people of being second to no orchestra that has ever furnished music in Bethel.

The music was of a high class as usual, and called forth not a few appreciative comments.

Everything was done that could be done to make the party a success, and that it was a pronounced success, all agree; in fact, it is commonly stated by those who attended that it will long be remembered as the largest and best appointed dancing party ever given in Bethel.

It was given by the following gentlemen:

E. H. Young, A. C. Frost, C. D. Hill, J. C. Billings, T. B. Goodwin, Mark Chandler, E. C. Rowe, Fred Edwards, Edw. King, E. M. Walker, Gilbert Tuell, L. A. Hall, T. F. Hastings, H. C. Rowe, C. A. Lucas, W. W. Hastings, G. R. Wiley, Claude Mills, A. L. Meserve, A. M. True, J. A. Twaddle, L. A. Pratt, C. C. Bryant, Frank Young, W. H. Young, C. M. Wormell, Geo. Ryerson, W. Foley, A. Van Dan Kerckhoven.

Notice.

All residents of Bethel Village and vicinity, who are interested in a reunion of the former teachers and students of Gould's Academy, are requested to meet at Gould's Academy, April 10, at 7:30 o'clock, to take steps toward perfecting arrangements for such reunion.

It is intended to make this reunion the event of the year in Bethel, and it is hoped that all who still have an interest in and affection for Gould's Academy will encourage this plan by their presence at the time and place above stated.

All who have catalogues of the Academy, printed previous to 1890, are requested to bring them at this time, and to loan them to the committee of arrangements as an aid in sending invitations to former teachers and students.

Per Order.

GILEAD.

A dance to-night in Town Hall. Ray Bennett is slowly improving.

Dr. Twaddle was in town Sunday.

Mrs. Eva DeCosta is sick with the grip.

J. W. Bennett spent Sunday with his family in Portland.

Monroe Wormell and the sheriff from Island Pond were in town Monday, searching for some property stolen from the wreck which occurred here a few weeks ago.

SALOMY JANE'S KISS.

BY BRET HARTE.

Copyright, 1899, by Bret Harte.

CHAPTER I.

Only one shot had been fired. It had gone wide of its mark, the ringleader of the vigilantes, and had left Red Pete, who had fired it, covered by their rifles and at their mercy, for his hand had been cramped by hard riding and his eye distracted by their sudden onset, and so the inevitable end had come. He submitted sullenly to his captors. His companion fugitive and horse thief gave up the protracted struggle with a feeling not unlike relief. Even the hot and vengeful victors were content. They had taken their men alive. At any time during the long chase they could have brought them down by a rifle shot, but it would have been unsportsmanlike and have ended in a free fight instead of an example. And, for the matter of that, their doom was already sealed. Their end by a rope and a tree, although not sanctioned by law, would have at least the deliberation of justice. It was the tribute paid by the vigilantes to that order which they themselves had disregarded in the pursuit and capture. Yet this strange logic of the frontier sufficed them and gave a certain dignity to the climax.

"If you've got anything to say to your folks, say it now, and say it quick," said the ringleader.

Red Pete glanced around him. He had been run to earth at his own cabin in the clearing, whence a few relatives and friends, mostly women and children, noncombatants, had overflowed, gazing vacantly at the 20 vigilantes who surrounded them. All were accustomed to scenes of violence, blood feud, chase and hardship. It was only the suddenness of the onset and its quick result that had surprised them. They looked on with dazed curiosity and some disappointment. There had been no fight to speak of, no spectacle. A boy, nephew of Red Pete, got upon the rain barrel to view the proceedings more comfortably. A tall, handsome, lazy Kentucky girl, a visiting neighbor, leaned against the doorpost, chewing gum. Only a yellow hound was actively perplexed. He could not make out if a hunt were just over or beginning and ran eagerly backward and forward, leaping alternately upon the captives and the captors.

The ringleader repeated his challenge. Red Pete gave a reckless laugh and looked at his wife, at which Mrs. Red Pete came forward. It seemed that he had much to say, incoherently, furiously, vindictively, to the ringleader. His soul would roast in hell for that day's work! He called himself a man, skulking in the open and afraid to show himself except with a crowd of other "kixies" around a house of women and children. Heaping insult on insult, inveighing against his low blood, his ancestors, his dubious origin, she at last flung out a wild taunt of his invalid wife, the insult of a woman to a woman, until his white face grew rigid and only that western American fetch of the sanctity of sex kept his twitching fingers from the lock of his rifle. Even her husband noticed it, and, with a half authoritative "Let up on that, old gal," and a pat of his freed left hand on her back, took his last parting. The ringleader, still white under the lash of the woman's tongue, turned abruptly to the second captive. "And, if you've got anybody to say goodbye to, now's your chance."

The man looked up. Nobody stirred or spoke. He was a stranger there, being a chance confederate picked up by Red Pete and known to no one. Still young, but an outlaw from his abandoned boyhood, of which father and mother were only an ugly forgotten dream, he loved horses and stole them, fully accepting the frontier penalty of life for the interference with that animal on which a man's life so often depended. But he understood the good points of a horse, as was shown by the one he bestrode, until a few days before the property of Judge Boompointer. This was his sole distinction.

The unexpected question stirred him for a moment out of the attitude of reckless indifference, for attitude it was and a part of his profession, but it may have touched him that at that moment he was less than his companion and his virago wife. However, he only shook his head. As he did so his eye casually fell on the handsome girl by the doorpost, who was looking at him. The ringleader, too, may have been touched by his complete loneliness, for he hesitated. At the same moment he saw that the girl was looking at his friendless captive.

A grotesque idea struck him. "Salomy Jane, you might do worse than come yere and say goodbye to a dyin' man, and him a stranger," he said.

There seemed to be a subtle stroke of poetry and irony in this that equally struck the apathetic crowd. It was well known that Salomy Jane Clay thought no small potatoes of herself and always held off the local swain with a lazy, nymphlike scorn. Nevertheless she slowly disengaged herself from the doorpost and, to everybody's astonishment, lounged, with languid grace and outstretched hand, toward the prisoner. The color came into the gray, reckless mask which the doomed man wore as her right hand grasped his left, just loosed by his captors. Then she paused. Her shy, fawnlike eyes grew bold and fixed themselves upon him. She took the chewing gum from her mouth, wiped her red lips with the back of her hand, by a sudden lithe spring placed her foot on his stirrup and, bounding to the saddle, threw her arms about his neck and pressed a kiss upon his lips.

They remained thus for a hushed moment, the man on the threshold of death, the young woman in the fullness of youth and beauty, linked together. Then the crowd laughed. In the audacious effrontery of the girl's act the ultimate fate of the two men was forgotten. She slipped languidly to the ground. She was the focus of all eyes, she only. The ringleader saw it and his opportunity. He shouted, "Time's up—forward!" urged his horse beside the captives, and the next moment the whole cavalcade was sweeping over the clearing into the darkening woods.

Their destination was Sawyers Crossing, the headquarters of the committee, where the council was still sitting and where both culprits were to expiate the offense of which that council had already found them guilty. They rode in great and breathless haste—a haste in which, strangely enough, even the captives seemed to join. That haste possibly prevented them from noticing the singular change which had taken place in the second captive since the episode of the kiss. His high color remained as if it had burned through his mask of indifference. His eyes were quick, alert and keen, his mouth half open, as if the girl's kiss still lingered there. And that baste had made them careless, for the horse of the man who led him slipped in a gopher hole, rolled over, unseated his rider and even dragged the bound and helpless second captive from Judge Boompointer's favorite mare. In an instant they were all on their feet again, but in that supreme moment the second captive had felt that the cords which bound his arms had slipped to his wrists. By keeping his elbows to his sides and obliging the others to help him mount it escaped their notice. By riding close to his captors and keeping in the crush of the throng he further concealed the accident, slowly working his hands downward out of his bonds.

Their way lay through a sylvan wilderness, middle deep in ferns, whose tall fronds brushed their horses' sides in their furious gallop and concealed the flapping of the captive's loosened cords. The peaceful vista, more suggestive of the offerings of nymphs and shepherds than of human sacrifice, was in a strange contrast to this whirlwind rush of stern, armed men. The western sun pierced the subdued light and the tremor of leaves with yellow lances, birds started into song on blue and dove-like wings, and on either side of the trail of this vengeful storm could be heard the murmur of hidden and tranquil waters.

In a few moments they would be on the open ridge, whence sloped the common turnpike to Sawyers, a mile away. It was the custom of returning cavalades to take this hill at headlong speed, with shouts and cries that heralded their coming. They withheld the latter that day as inconsistent with their dignity, but, emerging from the wood, swept silently like an avalanche down the slope. They were well under way, looking only to their horses, when the second captive slipped his right arm from the bonds and succeeded in grasping the reins that lay trailing on the horse's neck. "A sudden vauquero jerk, which the well trained animal understood, threw him on his

She pressed a kiss upon his lips. launches, with his fore legs firmly planted on the slope. The rest of the cavalcade swept on. The man who was leading the captive's horse by the reins, thinking only of another accident, dropped the line to save himself from being dragged backward from his horse. The captive wheeled and the next moment was galloping furiously up the slope.

It was the work of a moment, a trained horse and an experienced hand. The cavalcade had covered nearly 50 yards before they could pull up. The freed captive had covered half that distance up hill. The road was so narrow that only two shots could be fired, and these broke dust two yards ahead of the fugitive. They had not dared to fire low. The horse was the more valuable animal. The fugitive knew this in his extremity also and would have gladly taken a shot in his own leg to spare that of his horse. Five men were detached to recapture or kill him. The latter seemed inevitable. But he had calculated his chances. Before they could reload he had reached the woods again. Winding in and out between the pillared tree trunks, he offered no mark. They knew his horse was superior to their own. At the end of two hours they returned, for he had disappeared without track or trail. The end was briefly told in The Sierra Record:

"Red Pete, the notorious horse thief who has so long eluded justice, was captured and hung by the Sawyers Crossing vigilantes last week. His confederate unfortunately escaped on a valuable horse belonging to Judge Boompointer. The judge had refused $1,000 for the horse only a week before. As the thief, who is still at large, would find it difficult to dispose of so valuable an animal without detection, the chances are against either of them turning up again."

Salomy Jane watched the cavalcade until it had disappeared. Then she became aware that her brief popularity had passed. Mrs. Red Pete, in stormy hysterics, had included her in a sweeping denunciation of the whole un-verse, possibly for simulating an emotion in which she herself was deficient. The other women hated her for her momentary exaltation above them. Only the children still admired her as one who had undoubtedly "canoodled" with a man "a-goin' to be hung," a darling light beyond their wildest ambition. Salomy Jane accepted the change with charming unconcern. She put on her yellow nankeen sunbonnet, a hideous affair that would have ruined any other woman, but which only enhanced the pliancy of her fresh brunette skin, tied the strings, letting the blue braids escape below its frilled curtain behind, jumped on her mustang with a casual display of agile ankles in shapely white stockings, whistled to the bound and, waving her hand with a "So long, sonny!" to the lately bereft but admiring nephew, flapped and fluttered away in her short brown holland gown.

"I'll tell him that when he's on his way to be hung I'll kiss him."

Her father's house was four miles distant. Contrasted with the cabin she had just quitted, it was a superior dwelling, with a long "lean to" at the rear, which brought the eaves almost to the ground and made it look like a low triangle. It had a long barn and cattle sheds, for Madison Clay was a "great" stock raiser and the owner of a "quarter section." It had a sitting room and a parlor organ, whose transportation thither had been a marvel of packing. These things were supposed to give Salomy Jane an undue importance, but the girl's reserve and inaccessibility to local advances were rather the result of a cool, lazy temperament and the preoccupation of a large, protecing admiration for her father, for some years a widower.

Mr. Madison Clay's life had been threatened in one or two feuds—it was said, not without cause—and it is possible that the pathetic spectacle of her father doing his visiting with a shotgun may have touched her closely and somewhat prejudiced her against the neighboring masculinity. The thought that cattle, horses and "quarter section" would one day be hers did not disturb her calm. As for Mr. Clay, he accepted her as housewife, though somewhat interfering, and, being one of his own womankind, therefore not without some degree of merit. "Wot's this yere I've heard of your doin's over at Red Pete's? Honey-foggin' with a horse thief, eh?" said Mr. Clay two days later at breakfast. "I reckon you heard about the straight thing, then," said Salomy Jane unconcernedly, without looking around.

"Wot do you kallilate Rube will say to it? Wot are you goin' to tell him?" said Mr. Clay sarcastically.

Rube, or Reuben, Waters was a swain supposed to be favored particularly by Mr. Clay. Salomy Jane looked up.

"I'll tell him that when he's on his way to be hung I'll kiss him, not till then," said the young lady brightly. This delightful witticism suited the paternal humor, and Mr. Clay smiled, but nevertheless he frowned a moment afterward.

"But this yere hoss thief got away arter all, and that's a hoss of a different color," he said grimly.

Salomy Jane put down her knife and fork. This was certainly a new and different phase of the situation. She had never thought of it before, and, strangely enough, for the first time she became interested in the man. "Got away," she repeated. "Did they let him off?"

"Not much," said her father briefly; "slipped his cords and, going down the grade, pulled up short, just like a vauquero ag'in a lassoed bull, almost dragging the man leadin' him off his boss, and they skittled up the grade. For that matter, on that boss of Judge Boompointer's he must have dragged the whole posse of 'em down on their knees ef he liked. Saved 'em right too. Instead of stragin' him up afore the door or shootin' him on sight, they must allow to take him down afore the hull committee for an example. 'Example' be blowed! That's example enough when some stranger comes unbeknownst slap onto a man hanged to a tree and plugged full of holes. That's an example, and he knows wot it means. Wot more do you want? But then those vigilantes is allus cingin' and hangin' onto some mere scarp of the law they're pretendin' to despise. It makes me sick! Why, when Jake Myers shot your ole aunt Viney's second husband, and I laid in wait for Jake arterward in the Butternut hollow, did I let him to his hoss and fetch him down to your aunt Viney's cabin for an example before I plugged him? No!" in deep disgust. "No! Why, I just meandered through the wood, carelesslike, till he comes out, and I just rode up to him, and I said—"

But Salomy Jane had heard her father's story before. Even one's dearest relatives are apt to become tiresome in narration. "I know, dad," she interrupted, "but this yere man, this hoss thief, did he get clean away without gettin' hurt at all?"

"He did, and unless he's the fool enough to sell the hoss he kin keep away too. So, you see, you can't ladle out that purp stuff about a dyin' stranger to Rube. He wout' swallow it."

"All the same, dad," returned the girl cheerfully, "I reckon to say it, and say more. I'll tell him that ef he manages to get away, too, I'll marry him—there! But you don't ketch Rube takin' any such risks in gettin' ketched or in gettin' away arter."

Madison Clay smiled grimly, pushed back his chair, rose, dropped a perfunctory kiss on his daughter's hair and, taking his shotgun from the corner, departed on a peaceful Samaritan mission to a cow that had dropped a calf in the far pasture. Inclined as he was to Reuben's wooing from his eligibility as to property, he was conscious that he was sadly deficient in certain qualities inherent in the Clay family. It certainly would be a kind of misalliance.

FLOWER AND TREE.

In Australia there is said to be a gum tree which is 415 feet in height.

The rose was an emblem of immortality among the Syrians, and the Chinese planted it over graves.

The wood of the redwood tree never decays, it is said, and fallen trunks, which have been overgrown by old forests, are as solid as the day they fell.

Perhaps you don't know that a few roots of iris—the Japanese iris is best—planted in rich earth in an old washtub painted green on the outside will make a handsome ornament for your lawn, especially if you will give it plenty of water.

Are Your Kidneys Sick

Here is an Easy Way to Find Out.

Be sure you need medicine before you take it, but having once found out that you need it—lose no time in getting the best. If it's for the Kidneys, Liver, Bladder or Blood, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Chronic Constipation, the sickness peculiar to women, the best is Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, and a very simple way to find out if you need it, is to put some urine in a glass tumbler and let it stand 24 hours; if it then has a sediment or a milky, cloudy appearance; if it isropy or stringy, pale or discolored, you do not need a physician to tell you that you should take Favorite Remedy at once. It speedily cures such dangerous symptoms as pain in the back, frequent desire to urinate, especially at night, burning, scalding pain in passing water, the staining of linen by your urine and all the unpleasant and dangerous effects produced on the system by the use of whiskey and beer. All druggists sell Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy at $1.00 a bottle, or 6 bottles for $5.00.

By a special and particular arrangement with the manufacturers, our readers can try this grand medicine absolutely free. By simply sending your full name and post office address to the Dr. David Kennedy Corporation Rondout, N. Y., mentioning this paper, when a trial bottle of Favorite Remedy, together with a pamphlet of valuable medical advice, will be sent you by mail postpaid. The publishers of this paper guarantee the genuineness of this offer.

Peace.

"In me ye have peace."—John xvi, 33.
The shadow, Father, is our own,
That sends across our life a stain,
The discord is in us alone,
That makes the echoing earth complain.

O, God, how beautiful is life,
Since thou its soul and sweetness art!
How dies its childish fret and strife
On Thy all-harmonizing heart!
Leaving behind me dust and clay,
From selfish hindrance set free,
I find at last my broadening way
Unto my ocean rest in Thee.

Forming a Child's Character Before Its Seventh Year.

It has been stated repeatedly that the first seven years of a child's life cover sufficient ground in the formation of character practically to decide its future in so far as the child's higher attributes are concerned. Largely influenced by this assumption, the mothers of today devote a great deal of attention to the training of the baby from the day of its arrival.

The baby understands that when it is laid in the cradle, comfortable, warm and well nourished, it must go to sleep. This habit is established as soon as the small tyrant finds that lamentations are unavailing to secure for it the rocking to sleep or the enjoyment derived from making the weary mother walk the floor for hours.

Sometimes it is hard to make the mislaid but tender hearted parents understand how soon good habits can be established if firmly persisted in, and a young mother recently experienced considerable trouble in convincing the father of the child that it must not be rocked to sleep.

"I really can't stand hearing that poor baby cry," he said, when the child lifted up its voice and wept to be taken up.

"She will only cry a few times," urged the mother. "Please don't break up her training at the very beginning."

"Well, if you can stand it, I can't," said the husband, who was quite "broken up" with grief and sympathy for the shrieking morsel of humanity. "I don't see how you can bear to hear that child cry, and I'm going out of the house while this 'training' business goes on. And out he went.

A 'reform' in baby clothes is also absorbing the attention of the mothers, and the conviction prevails that the long frocks heretofore so popular for young babies are detrimental to the well-being and development of the child. The short, bell-shaped gown is advocated, and is fashioned of soft, clinging material.

A new method of bathing babies is that which has been brought from Russia, where it is much used among the peasants. A flannel sheet is laid in the tub, the corners hanging outside, and a flannel pillow is placed at one end of the tub to make it resemble a bed. Water heated to the proper temperature fills the tub to below the level of the pillow on which baby's head rests while the bath is in progress. When the bath is over the flannel sheet is folded around the baby, and the drying process is accomplished by means of heated towels, while the baby is held near a fire to avoid any danger of a chill.

Children take seriously the disappointments that come into their lives, and many mothers in punishing them fail to realize that little folks live entirely in the immediate present, and the emotion of the hour colors for them the future as far as they are able to look. Hence, when a young child is reprimanded, its whole view of life is for the time being, black and hopeless. The same rule applies to their pleasures, and in the happiness of the moment a child finds the promise for the future. When it arrives at the stage where it deals with the realities of life, the all-pervading effect of present enjoyments passes away, and with it the capacity for enjoying the present without care for the past or future. A poet has voiced this sentiment in these words:

"There are gains for all our losses,
There are balm for all our pains;
But when youth the dream departs,
It takes something from our hearts;
Something beautiful has vanished,
And will never come again."

The regular education of the child begins now at an early age, by means of kindergartens so liberally distributed throughout the country. This system being used in connection with the public schools places it within the reach of all.

Logic of Little Folks.

When a child begins to talk it develops in some cases an aptness for prevarication. One small boy displayed such a marked tendency in this direction that he was informed that "liars have their portion of the lake of fire." He was somewhat impressed by the statement, but after cogitating a few moments he exclaimed with the air of one who has solved some great question: "I'll tell you what I'd do, mamma; I'd crawl out while the devil was striking the match."

A contributor to "The Trained Motherhood Advertiser" gives the following instances of quaint sayings of children:

"Tommy," said a father to his precocious five-year-old son and heir, "your mother tells me she gives you pennies to be good. Do you think that is right?"

"Of course it is," replied Tommy. "You certainly don't want me to grow up and be good for nothing, do you?"

Robbie had longed earnestly for a baby brother and a pair of white rabbits. The answer to both wishes came on the same morning, but it was not quite satisfactory for there were two baby brothers and only one rabbit. Robbie was greatly disgusted at the mistake.

The next day his father found the following notice tacked to the gate post: "For Sail—One nice fat baby or I will swap him for a white Rabbit."

What unthankfulness it is to forget our consolations, to think so much upon two or three crosses as to forget a hundred blessings—Sibbes.

How to Bake Potatoes and Cheese.

Wash thoroughly rather soft, even sized potatoes; bake until just pressed between a cloth, but take care not to overcook. For six potatoes have ready a cup of grated cheese. Cut exactly in half, taking care to keep the skins whole. Scoop the potato out with a fork into a hot dish, sprinkle the cheese through, add two tablespoons of hot milk and pepper and salt to taste. Whip the whole lightly but thoroughly with a wire beater or fork, put back in the skins, allow a little knob of the filling to appear in the center where the potato is joined as if it had burst open naturally while baking. Rub each knob over with beaten egg, return to the oven long enough to brown nicely and serve.

How to Make Beef Rissoles.

Take slices of cold roast beef, rather lean, and mince very fine. Season lightly with pepper and salt, add a few savory herbs chopped, the peel of half a lemon and a little more than half the weight of the beef in bread crumbs. Mix thoroughly, bind with two well beaten eggs, form into balls, roll in egg and bread crumbs and fry to a nice brown. Serve with brown gravy poured over them.

How to Roast Loin of Pork.

The outer skin should be neatly and well scored in regular strips, to enable the carver to cut slices easily. Before putting the joint to the fire rub the skin with salad oil to prevent its blistering and baste frequently. Dish the pork, pour off the fat, put a little hot water in the pan, shake in a spoonful of flour and a little salt and pepper. Give it one boil over the fire, then strain over the meat. The pork will take from an hour and three-quarters to two hours to cook. Serve with sage and onions and apple sauce.

How to Steep Tripe.

One pound of tripe, three onions, an ounce of fine white flour, one-half pint of milk, a little salt. Cut the tripe in nice square pieces and put it in a lined saucepan with sufficient water to cover it. Steep gently for an hour and a quarter, then add the onions, peeled and sliced, and simmer for an hour. Mix the flour with the milk and add half a pint of the liquor from the tripe, season to taste and boil for ten minutes, drain the tripe and add it with the onions to the sauce. Let it get thoroughly hot and serve.

Questions for Women

If you were offered sure aid in time of trouble would you put it aside and accept something of doubtful efficiency?

If you saw before you a strong and safe bridge leading to your goal, would you ignore it to try some insecure and tottering structure?

The answer to these questions is plain. You would, of course, choose without hesitating what all evidence showed to be the safe thing, and you would risk nothing in useless experiments.

Why, then, do some women risk one of their most precious possessions—their health—in trying medicines of unknown value, which may even prove hurtful to them?

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has stood the test of years. It has the largest sale of any remedy for female ills in the world, and nothing could have given it this sale except its own merit.

Do not try any experiments, but buy what is known to be reliable. Mrs. Pinkham's Compound can do all that is claimed for it, and all statements in regard to it can be easily verified. Write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., for a little book she has just published containing letters from the mayor of Lynn, the postmaster and others.

Mrs. Pinkham's advice is offered free of charge to all women who write to her for aid. This invitation is constantly renewed. A million women have been cured of serious female ills by Mrs. Pinkham's advice and medicine.

Three Letters from One Woman, Showing How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Cured Falling of the Womb.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I see your advertisement in the papers in regard to treating woman's diseases, and would be grateful to you for your advice in my case. I am suffering from falling of womb, have pains in my sides and legs, in fact I ache all over. I am getting so weak I cannot stand on my feet much. I have the head-ache sometimes, and a choking tight feeling in my breast and throat. Have a baby seven months old. I hope to hear from you soon, as I am in so much distress."—Mrs. J. R. COMPTON, Egghornville, Va., May 16, 1898.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I followed your advice and I am now on the second bottle of your Vegetable Compound and I think it is going to cure me. If it does I will ever praise it, for I am, and have been, a great sufferer; but now I live in hopes of getting well."—Mrs. J. R. COMPTON, Egghornville, Va., July 12, 1898.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—Again I write to you. When I first wrote to you for advice in regard to my troubles I thought I could never get well again. After receiving your letter I followed your advice exactly, and thanks to you, I am cured of that dreadful disease. I cannot find words to express the good your medicine will do. It is really more than was recommended to me."—Mrs. J. R. COMPTON, Egghornville, Va., April 12, 1899.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—Your good advice has been worth more than all I ever received from a doctor. Words cannot express my gratitude to you for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After twelve years' suffering I am stout and healthy."—Miss MARY E. REED, Swan Creek, Ill., April 28, 1899.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I suffer female troubles. My doctor wishes my ovaries taken out, but I shall never consent. Menstruation is irregular, and my head has a tired feeling. Hospital treatment does me no good. I have five children and am forty-four years old. Please advise what medicine to take."—Mrs. E. H. SONDERS, 437 N. 40th St., Philadelphia, Pa., September 27, 1898.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I followed the advice you gave me and your medicine has cured me. I felt better when I had taken the Vegetable Compound but a week."—Mrs. E. H. SONDERS, Philadelphia, Pa., February 6, 1899.

Another Case of Nervous Prostration and Inflammation of the Bladder Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I have used your Vegetable Compound for female weakness and it has done wonders for me. I also had nervous prostration—was not able to look after my household work. After taking one bottle I began to improve, and am now better in every way and feel like a different person."—Mrs. DRILLA KEISER, Marionville, Pa., February 22, 1899.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I cannot praise your Vegetable Compound enough for the good it has done me. I suffered from inflammation of the bladder. I tried doctors, but obtained no relief. At last I decided to write to you, and now, thanks to your remedies, I am entirely cured."—Mrs. K. S. GRADY, 131 Union St., High Bridge, New York City, April 11, 1899.

Our Animal Spring Cleaners.

Animals and birds—and insects, too—go in regularly for a thorough spring cleaning of their homes at this time of year. Curtains come down, carpets are taken up, and all the rest of the process worked out, "regardless of cost."

For thoroughness, squirrels take first place. At this moment every pair of squirrels in the country is busy sweeping out and repairing the old home. Squirrels live in a big, roofed-in nest, high up a tree, and the squirrels just now are turning out their wretched husbands, who have to sit about in the cold and shiver, or do outside work. If the last year's house hasn't been blown to pieces by the gales they go over it carefully, collecting all dust and rubbish and throwing it out-of-doors. Then the ceiling is attended to, and thatched and made watertight with oak leaves and pine needles carefully worked together. The wall paper is generally in good repair, and only needs a little patching here and there with a dry leaf.

Then the carpet of soft moss is turned and shaken, and all old nutshells and the bits of beechmast picked out and thrown overboard. Under any squirrel's "drey" just now you may see the discarded rubbish lying about thickly. A new moss carpet is often necessary, and the whole house may want strengthening. Then the rafters are looked to—the bindings by which the nest is slung up to the twigs.

A female wasp is a scrupulous housewife, too. It is really her business to build a brand new home—or, rather, the beginnings of one—and lay her eggs in that. But wasps are lazy at best, and she often pitches on an old wasp's nest, and makes it do. She generally sits on it quietly for some time, as if making calculations, and moving her tail nervously. Then she hustles about with frantic haste, as if company were expected, and there was not a moment to lose. The chewed woodpaper walls she cleans with her leg brushes, as a fly washes its face, and patches up holes that might let in a draught, for draughts are bad for wasp grubs. Then she sweeps all dust and rubbish into a corner of the nest, which may be a paper-lined globe in a hay loft, or a paper-lined hole in the ground. This is not a tidy proceeding for a housewife, but it would take too long to carry all the rubbish away. Then she lays her eggs, and dies decently, leaving the grubs to hatch and look after themselves.

Moles spring-clean their castles at this time. A castle sounds a large order for one beast to clean, but that's the name of the mole's fortress, which is a sort of unturndish apartment underground, with a spare room or two, and scores of corridors leading all over the neighborhood. He begins by stamping the floor flat, and treading all unevenness down. This cannot be called good house keeping, but the result is satisfactory. Then he shores up the partition, and goes through the corridors, brushing them smooth with his fur as he passes.—Exchange.

If troubled with rheumatism, give Chamberlain's Pain-Balm a trial. It will not cost you a cent if it does no good. One application will relieve the pain. It also cures sprains and bruises in one-third the time required by any other treatment. Cuts, burns, frostbites, quinsy, pain in the side and chest, glandular and other swellings are quickly cured by applying it. Every bottle warranted. Price, 25 and 50 cents. M. A. M. J.

For sale by G. R. Wiley, Bethel; A. S. Bean, W. Bethel; W. H. Crockett, Locke Mills; J. W. Bennett, Gilead; B. S. Small & Son, Bryant Pond.

How to Make a Needlecase.

A very pretty little adjunct of the sewing basket is the needlecase. This can be made from any pieces of elegant cloth that may be left from a gown and trimmed tastefully. To make a needlecase cut out of pasteboard two sides the size and shape of any desired design. A large fig leaf or oak leaf is a pretty pattern. Cover them both neatly and line with silk. Pass silk embroidery over the sides around the edges, or the veins in the leaves can be sharply outlined with silk embroidery. Join the two sides together at the stem, if you select leaves, and tie with a piece of narrow ribbon, attaching an emery at one end and wax at the other. Use pieces of flannel for the leaves inside, or these can be substituted by small strips of flannel divided into tiny compartments only large enough for a paper of needles.

FAST DAY PROCLAMATION.

Conforming to a time-honored custom, inaugurated by the pioneers and early settlers of New England, venerated by our fathers, and very generally observed throughout that section of our country down to the present time; I do now, by the authority vested in me as Governor, and with the advice and consent of the Executive Council, appoint

Thursday, the Nineteenth Day of April, in the Year of Our Lord, One Thousand and Nine Hundred,

as a day of fasting and prayer, to be observed by all the people of Maine in a manner, which, in this sunset year of the nineteenth century, shall appropriately and reverently recall and recognize the association and memories which still cluster around this annually recurring day.

Given at the Executive Chamber, in Augusta, this twentieth day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred, and of the independence of the United States of America the one hundred and twenty-fourth.

LEWELLYN POWERS.

By the Governor,
Byron Boyd, Secretary of State.

The President's "plain duty" will be collected at the custom house.

Of course, as between the people and the sugar trust, the former do not expect to be considered first.

It really begins to look as though, after all, there might be something in those Kentucky charges of a political conspiracy to murder Goebel.

Lawyer Dill has received a fee of a cool million for acting as a successful peacemaker between Carnegie and Frick. Who pays this money? Who can afford to pay it? And where did they get it?

If there is anything more absurd than the contention that the United States has negated the Monroe doctrine either by its expansion in the east or by offering mediation in the Transvaal, we have not yet heard it. The Monroe doctrine depends on our power to enforce it and on the willingness of Europe to contest the issue with us. All these fine drawn arguments are no more than so much wind.

The country seems to have lost sight of the fact that the House will undoubtedly have another chance to vote on the Puerto Rican tariff, whether the Senate amends the pending bill or not. If the Senate does amend it, it must go back to the House, and if the Senate does not amend it, an effort will unquestionably be made to engraft a free trade amendment on the civil government bill when it comes up for action, as it must do sooner or later. Thus the Senate probably acts wisely in combining the two bills and letting the matter be fought out once for all.

The Puerto Rican bill was passed by the Senate yesterday by a vote of 40 to 31. This, however, does not settle the matter, as the bill not being identical with the original House bill, must be returned to the House for concurrence, where another effort will doubtless be made to substitute a free trade bill pure and simple. Such a turn of affairs, however, is hardly probable, for while there are many members who regret that they voted for the bill, yet they would hardly care to take the responsibility of thus unsettling the Puerto Rican question at this late day.

The Business and Art of Living.

"His own eye stands in his light," said old John Earle nearly four hundred years ago. Was he looking forward? Montaigne, who always set frankness before diplomacy, and yet was a most wary and wily man, said, "My business and my art is to live." Most of us could say the same thing, and add to it that day by day the difficulty of our business and our art grows more and more serious.

It is a familiar remark, heard on all sides, that happy marriage is practically prohibited to the poor and ambitious young men of our country, by reason of the tremendous competition in all the fields of labor, the consequent uncertainty of employment, and the inadequacy of wages to the increased demands of a happy domestic life. This may be true, if we grant that the increased demands are necessary, and if it can be shown that the certainty of employment and the rewards of labor have actually decreased. But if we go back to pioneer days, and carefully note conditions then, we shall be able to trace the general history of the "art and business" of living down, through all its changes, to the present moment, with a primitive criterion for our measure of difficulties. When a young man who got married had to build a cabin with his own hands, clear a little farm in the wilderness, and begin matrimonial bliss sandwiched between the chances of starvation or the tooth and claw of a wild beast, and having himself and his bride scalped by savages, there surely were not many advantages that he could count in his favor which would be considered valuable by the poorest youth of our day. His business and art was to live in spite of hardships too enormous for pleasant consideration in the light of electric lamps. He got pleasure out of conditions so crude, meagre and sapless that we cannot find them even romantic, while we are thundering along by steam at the rate of sixty miles an hour. We do not relish comparison with our grandfathers and grandmothers. What have those old fogies, with their flintlock guns and homemade spinning-wheels, to do with us?

It doubtless is true that every tub must keep itself from falling to staves if it would hold water—each generation must see to its own business and art of life; but there are some changeless and eternal canons of conduct looking toward genuine human happiness. One of them is mutual self-sacrifice for matrimony's sake. Love in a cottage may be out of date; but it is not abolished. No reasonably intelligent and shifty young man need nowadays live in a log cabin daubed with clay during his honeymoon; but the trouble in his path is that he cannot have a private palace car and a steam yacht in which to make a wedding tour.

A grizzled and finely preserved octogenarian told the other day, in a pleasantly reminiscent and glib mood, how he contracted to split rails for the minister who married him.

"I was nineteen when I took a wife," he said, "and my two hands were my capital, my only source of income. So I was glad to agree to split three hundred rails to pay the preacher for performing the marriage ceremony. The fun of it was that I finished the rail job in one day, when a fair day's work would have been two hundred rails. Seeing how easy had been the performance of my contract, the good parson declared that I had cheated him, and the upshot was that I had to satisfy him by splitting a hundred more rails than the agreement called for." Young men of our time would consider long before beginning the business and art of life under such conditions. When asked what wages he received during the first year of his married life the old man said: "Oh I was an extra-good worker; I got fifteen dollars a month."

It may be, after all, that we have a much easier life, and a far better prospect, than had any generation of men and women in all the past; but have we the optimism and the courage?

Our "business and art is to live"; but we want royal business and kingly art. Our own eyes stand in our light. MAURICE THOMPSON.

Rumford Falls Times: We are glad to note that a number of the leading Maine papers have taken up the cause of the birds, and are wielding a vigorous pen against the ruthless slaughter of millions of the most beautiful and dainty of God's creatures, just to gratify a senseless whim of fashion. ## Bureaus and Chiffoniers

It would be difficult to imagine anyone who could not be satisfied with some of these odd pieces of bedroom furniture. They comprise the desirable woods and nearly a hundred designs from the plainest, (and, consequently, the most inexpensive) to medium, rich and elaborate. It is our aim to give those with plenty of drawer room, good mirrors and gracefulness in outline for the lowest possible price. The large showing in this department only goes to illustrate how determined we are to meet every want of our patrons.

WISCONSIN ROADS.

State Road Convention Declares For State Aid.

At the first state good roads convention ever held in Wisconsin, which convened recently at Milwaukee, nearly 1,000 delegates were present.

Resolutions were formulated and referred to a committee declaring that the good roads movement deserves increased attention and the support of the United States department of agriculture; that the discussion of good roads and road building methods approved at the Wisconsin farmers' institutes should be indorsed; that every town should own and employ road graders, road rollers and a stone crusher for macadamizing purposes, to be purchased by collection of road taxes in cash, and that competent labor should be employed for the improvement of country roads leading to county seats and market towns.

The resolutions declared also that these results can best be obtained by state aid, which system is enjoyed by New Jersey, Massachusetts, New York, Rhode Island and Connecticut. The constitutional amendment now pending for such aid was favored.

The Cost of Mud.

More than $4,000,000 of public funds is spent annually for the 100,000 miles of roads in Illinois. It is estimated that this fund carefully spent would construct 2,000 miles of macadam roads and properly drain and roll 20,000 miles of dirt roads annually. Ninety-nine per cent of every load transported by railways or steamer lines is carried in a wagon or truck over a highway, it is said. As statistics collected by the office of road inquiry under the secretary of agriculture at Washington prove that it costs the American farmer nearly three times as much as it does the European agriculturist, the good roads movement is awakening great interest.

The Good Roads Campaign.

There will not often be a political campaign in this country which will involve more important interests than the campaign for good roads which is now on in many states.

The earnestness and activity with which this campaign is being pushed indicate an advance of popular intelligence and the growth of a true spirit of progress.

The agitation for good roads is confined to no section. It is going on in the north and the west and the south, though we regret to say that it is by no means as strong in the south as it is in the other sections of the country.—Atlanta Journal.

The Good Roads Movement.

The good roads movement in this country is not of recent origin, as many who are following and agitating it may think. In the earlier part of the century an agitation for good roads was kept up for nearly 50 years and had among its leaders such men as Henry Clay and John Calhoun. This movement resulted in the government taking a sufficient interest in it to provide for a national turnpike through the leading eastern cities to those in the west. About the time the movement became so prominent as to cause the road work to stop.

Left Handed Philosophy. The philosophy of a good many people appears to be similar to that of the French peasant.

"As for the roads which are now bad," he said, "it is of no use to repair them, for nobody travels over them, and, as for those which are good, why do anything to them until they get bad?"

Road Hints.

Poor roads make poor horses. Proper highways are good going and likewise coming.

GROVER HILL.

"There is no glory in star or blossom, Till looked upon by a loving eye; There is no fragrance in April breezes, Till breathed with joy as they wander by."

Peter Wheeler has put in his ice. Robins are with us again, and as usual are very musical.

Levi N. Bartlett and family recently visited at Dana Bartlett's. A. J. Peaslee has had his road shoveled out; so it is now passable.

Augustus Grover and True Browne have returned home from Geo. Chapman's, where they have been at work.

Mr. W. M. Browne, who is in Epworth, Iowa, wrote that he should expect his children to come west in about ten days.

Mr. E. C. Jackson, who passed the winter with his daughter, Mrs. N. A. Stearns, has returned to his home at Norway.

Alta Vera Whitman, who has been boarding at A. L. Whitman's the past fall and winter, has gone to Boston, where her father is.

ALBANY.

F. G. Sloan was on the sick list a few days last week.

We understand that Henry Pingree started for California Mar. 29.

Nearly every one in this vicinity seems to be taking advantage of the fine snow crusts.

S. G. Bean and sister Ada, also Mrs. Alma Judkins, spent Apr. 1, with Mr. and Mrs. Harry Sawin.

Parker Braden has nearly finished his job getting off birch and poplar on the Kilborn place.

Miss Sibyl and Viola Cummings, and Miss Ada Bean, called on Mrs. Bertha Brooks at her old home in Bethel, March 29.

The entertainment given by the L. R. T. Club at Albany Town House on Monday evening Mar. 26, was a grand success both socially and financially. There was a goodly number present, people coming from nearly all the surrounding towns, Bethel, Greenwood, Waterford and Stoneham. After the program, nearly all took part in shaking "the light fantastic toe" until the wee sma' hours of the morn. Connors and Inman furnished very pleasing music throughout the evening.

GRAFTON.

Mr. Leighton surveyed his pulpwood, Saturday. He will break camp soon, as the ice on the pond is breaking up, so that he cannot haul any more.

SOUTH WOODSTOCK.

Easter services will be held in the church, April 15, with appropriate Easter music by the M. E. choir.

Mrs. Frank E. Davis and little Ellis are spending the week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Bryant of Greenwood.

Many are engaged in tapping trees. The large sugar orchards of J. H. Davis and W. S. Davis present a very interesting appearance with their well arranged and up-to-date sugar houses. The modern equipments might well be the envy of many a housekeeper.

The Best in the World.

We believe Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the best in the world. A few weeks ago we suffered with a severe cold and a troublesome cough, and having read their advertisements in our own and other papers, we purchased a bottle to see if it would effect us. It cured us before the bottle was more than half used. It is the best medicine out for colds and coughs.—The Herald, Andersonville, Ind.

WORMS

Hundreds of children and adults have worms but are treated for other diseases. The symptoms are—indigestion, with a variable appetite; foul tongue; offensive breath; hard and full belly with occasional griping and pains about the navel; heat and itching eruption in the rectum and about the anus; eye heavy and dull looking; the nose short, dry cough; grinding of the teeth; starting during sleep; slow fever; and often in children, convulsions.

TRUE'S PIN WORM ELIXIR

is the best worm remedy made. It has been in use since 1851, is purely vegetable, harmless and effective. Where no worms are present it acts as a Tonic, and cures the condition of the mucous membranes of the stomach and bowels. A positive cure for Constipation, Biliousness, and a reliable remedy in all the common complaints of children. Price 25c. Sold by Dr. J. E. True & Co., Auburn, Me.

MAINTAINING ROADS.

CONSTANT CARE NEEDED TO KEEP THEM IN REPAIR.

Necessary Appliances and Tools For the Use of the Roadmen—Rollers and Sprinkling Carts—Points to Consider—Value of Wide Tires.

State Engineer Bond of New York is paying great attention to the matter of construction of good roads and has issued a bulletin calling attention to the necessity of great care in keeping the roads after they have been constructed. He says:

"Roads in the country are continually subjected to the action of the elements, the wear of the wheels and horses' feet and the continual pounding they receive from passing loads.
Therefore, after a road has been accepted by the state engineer as completed and turned over to the officers of the county, it is then that the duties of the officers really commence, and it depends on their efforts as to what the life of the road will be whether they will spend the money wisely on maintenance or allow the road to deteriorate and make expensive repairs necessary.

"As no provision has been made in the Higbie-Armstrong bill for such maintenance, aside from the provisions in section 13, 'All persons owning property abutting on such road so improved or residing thereon shall thereafter pay all highway taxes assessment against them in money, in the manner
now provided by law,' it may be well to consider the various methods in vogue by which roads can be kept from deteriorating.

"Of these three, only the third proposition is the proper one. That is the system used by France and Germany, the objection to No. 1 being that it has been tried and found wanting; to No. 2, the aid given by the rural population is not applicable to the maintenance of an improved road, as such a road needs
the supervision of a man perfectly familiar with that class of work, and such a one can only gain that familiarity by being constantly and permanently employed. Men who have been given charge of a piece of road soon become interested in it and will strive energetically and intelligently to make their portion of the road the best. It would seem advisable, therefore, that the third proposition should be adopted by the supervisors of the county in which the improved road is situated—that is, a man should be appointed and employed permanently who should have the road, or a certain portion of it, in his charge and who, under the supervision of the officers of the county, should be responsible for its maintenance.

"The total points in the care of a road are as follows: First, keeping the surface of the road free from all deposits, dust or mud, horse manure or other rubbish; second, filling of ruts and de-pressions; third, cleaning ditches and seeing that all culverts and water courses are free from obstructions;
fourth, sprinkling the roads in dry weather.

"To carry out properly these absolutely necessary operations the county officers must supply their roadmen with such appliances and tools as are required. After a road has been handed over to the care of the supervisors they should immediately order a sufficient quantity of the material to be used in filling ruts and depressions.
They will therefore need trap rock and limestone screenings. It will cost less per mile of road kept one year on this system than it will under the old and bad system of semiannual or annual repairs. Without continual attention there can be no such thing as a permanently good road. The material should be placed in regular piles or storage places along the side of the road, 200 to 250 feet apart, but in no case should it lie on the road or encroach upon it.

"It would appear that a mile of road
of good material, with heavy travel, would need about 32 yards of material
a year, and piles of stone placed 200 feet apart, say 6 feet long, 3 feet wide and 1 1/2 feet high, would be ample to supply all needs. Such a pile would contain one cubic yard and could be easily measured at all times. By placing them 200 feet apart 26 of such piles to the mile would suffice.

"The next thing to be purchased by the supervisors is a kit of tools to be used by the man in whose care the road is placed. He should be furnished with a wheelbarrow, pick, shovel, brush broom, hoe, rake, profile board, level, line, bush hook, spade, four pound hammer and a road rammer about 7 inches in diameter and weighing about 14 pounds. Every road should have a roller, and if the length of the road does not justify the purchase of a steam roller one drawn by horses should be used. The horse roller should weigh not less than four tons and the steam roller not less than ten tons.
The weight per inch of width is more important than the gross weight of the machine, and rollers should be built so as to exert a pressure of not less than 500 pounds to the lineal inch, measured across face of rollers. A sprinkling cart is also one of the necessary adjuncts of a well kept road, as the tendency of the road to ravel in dry weather may be quickly arrested by the judicious use of water."

Mr. Bond also advocates instructing the farmer so that he will see the necessity for the use of wide tires.

Tickling Straws.

"No, sir," he said to the captain,
"I am not seasick, but am really disgusted with the motion of this vessel."

"What kind of wood are you using to cook with to-day?" "Hard spruce." "Hard spruce?" "Yes, hard—to get." He started for the woodshed.

At a restaurant in Tuscon during a heavy washout, when no train had arrived for several days and there were no potatoes in the market, the bill of fare was printed, "Potatoes en route," and another read, "Potatoes in box car."

"Now, George, you must divide your cake honorably with your brother Charles." "What is honorable, mother?" "It means that you should give him the largest piece." "Then, mother, I would rather Charlie should divide it."

"Oonomowok!" cried the brakeman. "O'Connor may walk, may he?" exclaimed an Irishman at the other end of the car. "An' faith,
if yez name me, yez'll have a foin time makin' O'Connor walk whin he's paid foive dollars for this bit
o' pasteboard."

Teacher—Can you tell us how the American and French Republics differ from each other?

Little George—The French ain't got no log cabins for their presidents to be borned in.

"It is a curious world," my barber said yesterday; "nobody ain't satisfied. The last man but one in my chair made me brush and grease his curly hair till it was straight, and the next man to him made me curl his straight hair.—
San Francisco Argonaut.

"After the clerk had pulled down everything in the store without satisfying his customer, a woman, she asked him if there was anything else he had not shown her.
"Yes, ma'am," he said, "the cellar;
but if you wish it I will have that brought up and shown to you."— Lowell Citizen.

A German butcher at Clifton Springs, N. Y., has a manner quite his own of commending to patrons
the excellent qualities of his merchandise. To a lady who was selecting a roast, he complacently remarked: "This quarter of beef is highly recommended by many of our best families."

Librarian—This book looks rather dry, and the title is so unattractive that I'm afraid it won't be read as it deserves.

Assistant—Mark it with two stars in the catalogue. When people see that it can't be taken out without special permission, you'll find they'll form in line to get it.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

OF COD-LIVER OIL WITH HYPOPHOSPHITES

should always be kept in the house for the following reasons:

FIRST—Because, if any member of the family has a hard cold, it will cure it.

SECOND—Because, if the children are delicate and sickly, it will make them strong and well.

THIRD—Because, if the father or mother is losing flesh and becoming thin and emaciated, it will build them up and give them flesh and strength.

FOURTH—Because it is the standard remedy in all throat and lung affections.

No household should be without it.
It can be taken in summer as well as in winter.

Air Churns.

Much is being done at the present time to induce the small dairyman either to buy or take the agency for some form of air churn or other similar device, for which great things are claimed as to butter making capacity, says Professor Hayward in The National Stockman.

The writer and heads of dairy departments in other institutions have received frequent letters in regard to these dairy wonders, and this occasion is taken to state a few facts concerning them.

The value of any churn is dependent upon its simplicity and durability, upon the completeness with which it does its work, upon the power required to operate it and upon the ease of cleaning it after the butter has been removed.

Although there have been, it is claimed,
more patents granted for churns than for any other single agricultural implement, with the possible exception of farm gates, nevertheless it is a fact that just as much and just as good butter can be made with the old fashioned dash churn as with the most modern churn known.

The principle of all churns is the same, whether they are dash churns or the so called air churns, and it should be remembered that no churn can get more butter from a given amount of milk or cream than it contains of butter fat plus a reasonable amount of water and caseous matter.

Remarkable Cure of Rheumatism.

KENNA, Jackson Co., W. Va.

About three years ago my wife had an attack of rheumatism which confined her to her bed for over a month and rendered her unable to walk a step without assistance, her limbs being swollen to double their normal size. Mr. S. Maddox insisted on my using Chamberlain's Pain Balm. I purchased a fifty-cent bottle and used it according to the directions and the next morning she walked to breakfast
without assistance in any manner, and she has not had a similar attack since.—A. B. PARSON.

STATE OF MAINE

COUNTY OF OXFORD, s. s.

March 16, A. D. 1900.

Taken this 16th day of March
A. D. 1900 on execution dated February 28th, 1900, issued on a judgment rendered by the Supreme Judicial Court for the County of Oxford, at the term thereof begun and held on the second Tuesday of February 1900, to wit, on the 19th day of February, 1900, in favor of Julia A. Stearns of Riley Plantation in said county, against Berta A.
Austin of Rumford in said county,
for one hundred and sixty-six dollars and twenty-five cents, debt or damage, and eighteen dollars and five cents, costs of suit, and will be sold at public auction at the office of Herrick & Park Attorneys, in Bethel, in said county, to the highest bidder, on Saturday the 12th day of May A. D. 1900 at 11 o'clock in the forenoon, the following described real estate and all the right, title and interest, which the said Berta A. Austin has and had in and to the same on the 28th day of September A. D. 1898, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, the time when the same was attached on the writ in the same suit, to wit: a certain tract or parcel of land, and being a part of lot No. 78
in the third division of lots in said Rumford known as the Chamberlain Hill, on the south-east side of the Androscoggin River, being all the land of Berta A. Austin southeast of the following line, commencing at the north-east corner of the late Peter Thompson homestead farm, thence following the lot line north-easterly until it reaches the homestead farm of Peter A. and Amos Austin except a piece of land that was reserved in a deed dated Dec. 8, 1865, said parcel reserved being described as follows: beginning at a pile of stones on the height of the ledge near the centre of lot No. 19 now or formerly owned by Peter A.
Thompson, thence south about twenty-three degrees east, about forty rods to a large stone, thence south about 11 degrees east, about twenty-seven rods to steep, high ledge, thence southeasterly on said steep, high ledge as far as the same will answer for a sheep pasture fence, from thence the nearest course to one hundred acre lot No.
21 in said second division of lots, said reserved portion containing about nine acres more or less. The premises which I shall sell being the same that were deeded by Samuel V. Abbott to said Berta A.
Austin by deed dated Nov. 23, 1887,
recorded in Oxford Registry, book 211, page 348.
